Harbor carly last summer, he determined that he would stay till he caught a sea bass if it took all winter. He fitted up the most approved bass tackle and went to the places where others were the most successful, but could not get a bite. The aummer wore steadily on, but bass luck addingt come his way. He came to be known as an unlucky man, so far as base fishing went. When his boat neared a party of lishermen who were catching bass they lost their luck, and he was shuned as a Jonah for bass. Mr. Woodward ward was determined, however, and stuck to it. His family came away, but he held on, still hoping to catch a bass before the season closed.

One evenim last week he and a companion were casting their lines from a high rock at the cdge of the water. It was almost dark, when Mr. Woodward's line tugged, and he became aware that the hook had been taken. For him to get a good solid bite was so innusual that he at first doubted, but he led out the line till it was nearly all gone. The fish was surely a big one, and dead game, for it was almost too strong for the line when reeled in. When he got the fish well in hand, he climbed down over the rock into the sea up to his waist, so he could better handle it. He called for his companion, who dropped his rod and came to the rescue, and the two managed to pull the fish near enough for one of them to get it by the gills. The fish was a thirty-five pound bass, the biggest fish of the kind caught during the season. Mr. Woodward sent some of the scales from the monster to his wife, who was in this city, and they looked like big thumb nails rather than his wife, who was in this city, and the looked like big thumb nails rather than obtaining money under false pretenses. Bonner and his old and decrepit wife do a fairly large business as fortune tellers, Bonner being a sort of a runner for the eatablishment, which is a tumble-down old shanty on a clay bank at the east end of Alley 15. Mrs. Smith, a while woman, went to Mrs. Bonner, who in appearance is the embodiment of the ideal witch, to consult her as to Smith's fascination for a Mrs. Case, another white woman married to Ad Case, colored. The woman gave her some silly directions, which included liberal fees. Afterwards Bonner and Ike Smith called at the other Smith's house and, it is alleged, stole $11 from a bureau drawer. The Bonner couple are religiously feared by many colored persons and some ignorant whites as "voudoo" priest and priesters. They are credited with making a good deal of money out of this superstition. Certain it is that old John always has enough to keep drunk. AN OLD SPRINTER

A stranger who is a professional foot racer came to Martin's Ferry several weeks ago, ostensibly to sell saloon fixtures, but really to catch a sucker, and Maywood, paid his board regularly, as peared to have plenty of money and represented himself as an agent for a Toledo firm. He taked a great deal about foot racing and finally arranged for a race with David Schaeffer, a nailer for a race with David Schaeffer, a naiter at the Laughlin mill and the champion foot racer in this section. The purse agreed upon was $1,000, and Saturday was the day set and Walnut Grove the place. Accordingly the race took place there Saturday evening, Schaefler getting the start, but he was defeated by three yards. His opponent, who gave his name as Tim McCarty, was an easy winner. A large crowd witnessed the race and considerable money changed hands. McCarty pocketed the stakes and left with a man said to be his brother, who was there with several thousand dollars to bet on him.

The winner claims to have made the best record in America, has won every race he ever ran and made thousands of dollars at foot racing. He had taken an order from John Kyne for bar fixtures, and told Kyne that he would know it when he got them. After the race Saturday night he offered to bet Schaeffer he could give him eight yards start and beat him. He says his name is Mc-Carty while in Martin's Ferry.

"Royal" in all ways Superior.

I find the Royal Baking Powder to be absolutely pure, containing no injurious article whatever. The ingredients are only those proper for a baking powder of the highest degree of excellence as to wholesomeness and strength. Its entire freedom from lime and thumina, which are found in other baking powders made from commercial cream of tartar, from phosphates, or with alum, is an evidence of the remarkable perfection to which this most admirable baking preparation has been brought in respect to the purity of its ingredients, much superior to any other I have examined, or whose composition has been made known.

But the cradle will not hold it in the sweet bye-aud-by.
And then high chairs and rocking horses the parents must secure Among the many other things they're called on to procure.
As life proceeds there comes a time when single chairs won't do.
And papa has to buy something that's big enough for two.
A little later, mind you, one chair is big enough for two.
A little later, mind you, one chair is big enough.
To stand the strain we make them of the strongest kind of stuff.
